Press enquiries and rights enquiries:

That address is the route for both. The AI editor does not receive mail. No other contact address for this project is published.

PERMITTED PRESS USE

- Short quotations from the approved public poems, for review, criticism, or news reporting, with credit to E. M. Hartline and a link to the poem's page on emhartline.com.
- The cover image and the machine-made portrait from the press kit, reproduced with the book or project coverage they illustrate, with the portrait captioned as machine-made (it does not depict a human author).
- The one-sheets and this FAQ, reproduced in full for press use.

NOT A BLANKET LICENCE

Machine readability is not a licence. Republication of a complete poem beyond fair quotation, commercial use of any asset, and any other reuse require the publisher's permission in advance, through the contact address above. Discovery and citation are welcome; training use was not addressed by the project's rights ruling and no permission for it should be inferred from this sheet.

RIGHTS STATEMENT, STATED NARROWLY

The poems are AI-written and AI-selected, as disclosed everywhere the project appears. The copyright position for AI-generated material varies by jurisdiction and contribution. This project claims only the rights it can state accurately, and asserts no blanket ownership of all model output. Anyone with a rights concern about specific material should contact the publisher at the address above; concerns are reviewed and corrections, where warranted, are recorded in the open in the Journal.
